BULLSEYE

Oh, shoot! Where’d that dang island go?
I thought for sure it was there a minute ago.

Bullseye turns around to face his passengers. His weird hat is pulled low and his mouth hangs a bit open, giving him a slow-minded appearance. Most noteworthy are his extremely thick, coke-bottle eyeglasses.

BULLSEYE

Huh? Whoops, guess I was talking to myself again.

The team shares shocked expressions.

BULLSEYE

Oh, I do apologize, folks...I’m just a little shy...Especially around all the pretty ladies.

HERMAN

All the pretty ladies? There’s only one lady here.

BULLSEYE (bashfully)

Huh?...Ohhh, okay, I gotcha...You wanna to keep the other gal to yourself.
I don’t blame you cuz she sure is a real cutie.

Bullseye looks shyly at Jenny, then at Angelo. Angelo is flattered and adjusts his muumuu.

HERMAN

Bullseye, how exactly is your vision?

BULLSEYE

Well, Mom says it’s time for some new glasses, but I like these. They fit perfect, right on top of my nose. See? [adjusts glasses] The eye doctor gave me some special ones to wear when I drive the boat, but I sure don’t like the way they make me look. When I put ’em on, makes me feel like I’m one of them birdwatchers instead of a boat driver. Maybe I can’t exactly see perfect with ’em, but I know they’re pretty magical with the ladies.
